The world's first professional interior decorator, Elsie de Wolfe (later Lady Mendl) would applaud the interior garden ambience of this pool house, designed by architect Tom Kirchoff for a venerable 1928 Southampton cottage. It was Elsie de Wolfe who made lavish use of garden trelliswork in America's most fashionable homes early in this century. In the same classic spirit, English designer Georgina Fairholme has paired treillage with simple white fabrics inside the pool house. Outside, the garden itself is all white, even to the green-and-white variegated hollies.
